

MDS ups data storage capacity

Data storage and application host centre MDS Technologies is to open a second facility enabling it to double its data capacity.

MDS Technologies is a data storage and development company, which acts as data and application host for a number of corporate clients including Hewlett Packard, Ericsson and Vodafone.

MDS hosts and stores third party applications, and ensures they are developed and integrated with Vodafone devices. Examples include over-the-air games.

The business, which turned over £2 million last year, has seen an increase in hosting services and client base. It now has 30 clients and 50 projects run from its sites.

Dawson - increased storage

Managing director Phil Dawson said: "We have seen a high interest in the mobile side over the past 12-18 months as mobile data has become more mainstream and in some cases offers the same services and speeds as you'd expect from a PC.

"Companies are considering whether or not they need to host applications and data services in house because of the cost."